2. About the middle of June [REDACTED] submitted his separation travel voucher. Turner Air Force Base Finance Office records indicate this voucher was returned to [REDACTED] 21 June for the inclusion of additional records. These records were attached and the voucher was resubmitted to Turner Air Force Base about 1 July. The Turner Finance Office records show that the voucher was returned a second time to [REDACTED] on 6 July, this time because of lack of notarization of certain travel forms. This notarization was obtained by [REDACTED], the corrected travel voucher was then given to [REDACTED] Base B finance officer, who in turn presented the voucher to Headquarters' Finance Office for submission to Turner Air Force Base.

3. References A and B indicate that the latest corrected travel voucher was hand delivered on 18 July to Lt. [REDACTED] for transmission through his office to Turner Air Force Base. There is no further record of the voucher beyond the action noted in references A and B. [REDACTED] office was contacted on 20 November and that office was requested to search its records for any record of subject voucher. [REDACTED] informed me that they have made repeated searches with negative results. Phone calls to the Turner Air Force Base Finance Office by both [REDACTED] and the undersigned have failed to disclose the whereabouts of subject voucher.

4. [REDACTED] has advised the undersigned that he will personally request Col. Geary to make one final effort to locate the voucher or any record of the voucher which might exist at his office. If this final search proves negative, it appears that our only alternative is to ask [REDACTED] to complete and submit a new voucher for his travel.
